“A challenging iGAS outbreak”

Dr. Patrick Galange MD, MBA, CCFP, FRCPC
Associate Medical Officer of Health
Public Health Resources, Halton Region

Dr. Patrick Galange is an Associate Medical Officer of Health at Halton Region, as well as a practicing family physician and hospitalist in Hamilton. He also serves as an Adjunct Lecturer at the University of Toronto, Dalla Lana School of Public Health, Clinical Public Health Division.

Dr. Galange earned his Medical Doctorate from the University of Ottawa, followed by his family medicine training at McMaster University, and a residency in Public Health and Preventive Medicine at the University of Toronto. He holds a Master of Public Health from Johns Hopkins University and a Master of Business Administration from the Ivey School of Business.

He is passionate about all areas of public health, with a focus on communicable diseases, environmental health, emergency management, and the application of epidemiology and biostatistics. He is particularly interested in how upstream social determinants of health significantly impact health outcomes in these areas.

Originally from Oakville, Dr. Galange now resides in Hamilton. Outside of his professional commitments, he enjoys spending time with his wife, family, and friends. His hobbies include traveling, reading, cycling, skiing, and new this year, pickle ball.
